Gemma's Dominican splash!

Lady Atkinson heats up the Caribbean!

➔ WE'RE NOT sure that it's necessarily good news that Gemma still gets up at 5.30am for gruelling fitness sessions, even when she's hanging about the Dominican Republic in a mismatched bikini. For us, a holiday is about scientifically expending the smallest amount of energy possible between bed pit and sun lounger. Even putting on sun lotion feels like calorie-burning hard work.

Still, at least the Casualty star will feel less guilty about hogging the all-you-can-eat buffet and pints of best later!

1 Lioness and crocs square up in this tooty/talony winner-takes-all battle!

Lion takes on crocs!

For the prize of a hippo dinner.
Mmm... hippo. Delicious!

THESE PICS tell the yarn of a plucky lioness in the Masai Mara, Kenya. Taking on six toothy crocs, the prize was this rapidly inflating hippo carcass. Eventually, everyone won, as the lioness ate her fill before leaving the crocs to the rest. Apart from “legs akimbo” hippo, who not only died but was then humiliated. Like an amphibious Jesus.

2 Lioness makes the first moves thrashing the water with a powerful forearm smash.

3 Croc launches his offensive as lioness unleashes another of her fearsome left jabs.

SNAPPY MEAL!

4 Croc is sent to the canvas. Looks like lioness will get first dibs on this tasty morsel!

Tale of the tape!

LION

SIZE:
175cm
WEIGHT:
190kg

M.O.:
Goes for throat with jaws/talons. Rips it out or suffocates prey.

BONUS FACT:
Mating lions copulate 20 to 40 times a day.

CROC

SIZE:
550kg
WEIGHT:
5m

M.O.:
Grabs prey, then barrel-rolls underwater until victim drowns.

BONUS FACT:
Crocs can hold their breath for two hours.

Batman: Arkham Knight first look!

A new Bat Sign went up! We stuck our nose in the new game!

UK GAME
development
chaps

Rocksteady have created a real buzz around the Batman franchise. Then they stepped away for last year's Arkham Origins, and it wasn't so good. Thankfully, Rocksteady were benched because they're working on this – Arkham Knight – that Nuts had an exclusive look at. Here's the news, from our brain to yours. It's out at Christmas. Probably.

WORDS: NICK COWEN

WE BUILT THIS CITY!

The developers say that they've created a Gotham City to scale that players are free to explore. It's five times bigger than the urban sprawl in Batman: Arkham City and meticulously detailed.

KNIGHT FEVER!

"Just one more
'bong' out of you, matey..."

THE DARK KNIGHT RETURNS!

Set 12 years after Arkham City, this time Batters is facing off against The Scarecrow, who's threatening to execute a WMD-style attack on the city. Quick! Punch henchmen in their stupid heads!

"Clear skies and a warm evening, Darren Bett said. Pathetic!"

"Blimey! This novelty electronic ciggie's a bit lively!"

NEW GAME, NEW VILLAIN!

This is the Arkham Knight, the brand new villain created by the developers to take on Batman. He looks to have the same tastes in clothing as our cowl-hatted hero, but he's also a fan of the firearm.

FIND THE WMDS!

With The Scarecrow announcing that he's planted a fear toxin weapon in the city, Commissioner Gordon has evacuated all Gotham's citizens. So criminals have the run of the streets. A bit like Birmingham!

"You looked different on Grindr!"

"This new one-way system's confusing the hell out of me!"

CHICKS DIG THE CAR!

It took 12 years, but Batman's finally built his own Batmobile, which can crash through trees, traffic islands, wire fences and even the odd concrete wall. It also has smart missiles to clear gridlock

BEATEN BATMAN!

In the demo Nuts watched, the Arkham Knight got the drop on Batman. The developers say he's been created to be the physical and intellectual equal of the Caped Crusader.

UFC 356 was a belter

BAT ATTACK!

Porsche's new Boxster!

The 2014 GTS is faster, lower, more handsome!

- Many argue that the gap between the Boxster/ Cayman and the 911 had already narrowed to a fag paper, and this GTS pack will only make you ponder the extra wedge for a 911 even more. GTS Boxster prices start from £52,800 – still well south of the cheapest (£73,400) new 911, which shares the identical 3.4-litre motor.
- So what does the GTS offer over the Boxster S? Well, 14bhp more power and 7lb-ft more torque, for a start. And depending on whether you opt for six-speed manual or PDK double-clutch paddle auto, 0-62 comes up in either 5.0 seconds or 4.9 (4.7 in Sport+ mode) – just one tenth of a second off the Carrera 2 manual 911.
- Top speed is 175mph, which is only 3mph short of matching the base 911.
- But the GTS has always concentrated less on brawn and more on cat-like agility. Beyond a subtle bodykit and £800k 918 Spyder-inspired front bumper that picks it out only to the beadiest of eyes, the Box GTS wears spider-leg skinny-finned 20in wheels instead of 19s.
- Other unmissable GTS-only features include darker bi-xenon headlights and the aero-tweaked rear bumper with diffuser vanes. Dive inside and you'll be greeted with sports seats exclusively wrapped in Alcantara. External badging on the GTS cars is finished in gloss black on both the back end and door bottoms.
- Porschophiles will appreciate the Sport Chrono package, which sharpens vehicle throttle responses and features dynamic engine mounts that automatically stiffen under hard acceleration, braking and hardcore cornering to eliminate bodyroll. Clever.

- The GTS also boasts electronically controlled adaptive damping – better known as Porsche Active Suspension, or PASM. This drops the ride by 20mm and permits a variety of stiffness settings, depending on what tarmac you're on, and your need for comfort or corner conquering. PASM is usually a £1,000 option on other Porsches.

- Is it worth the extra £5k over a Boxster S, or should you just spend the wedge on a sunburn holiday and some fancy new shoes? Well, if previous Porsches to bear the GTS badge are anything to go by, you'll kick yourself for not shelling out the extra.

As arcade simulators went, it was impressive

A quick word with Brydon & Coogan!

Rob & Steve on Oscars, the French and diving!

Hi Rob and Steve!
Is it true neither of you wanted to make the first series of The Trip?

Rob: It sounded very self-indulgent. We had to be persuaded.

Steve: Celebrities playing themselves had been done. It didn't seem a novel idea.

Rob: Then Michael [Winterbottom, director of The Trip] pushed the food angle. Then it seemed risky and different.

Steve: There's always the notion that to do interesting stuff you have to risk failure. It definitely felt like that.

This time round, you've sort of swapped roles...

Rob: I've got itchy feet. I'm looking for adventure. You're a bit more settled.

Steve: I think Michael [Winterbottom] just wanted to make the second Trip sound a bit different to the first. He failed. It's exactly the same as before, it's just in Italy. So nicer scenery.

What did you love and what did you hate about Italy?

Steve: The driving?

Rob: I wouldn't say I hated the driving.

Steve: The lane discipline is terrible. You did ask!

Rob: The lane discipline is non-existent.

Steve: It made me appreciate this country, actually, in terms of driving practice. What did I love? The Italians have something honest and forthright in their nature, which you don't get with, say, the French. If an Italian tells you they love you, they mean it. If they tell you to fk off, they mean it. In France, they might be polite, but you can't help thinking they're thinking something very different.

Rob: Steve's never liked the French.

Steve: They claim to be these gastronomic kings, but they've basically been serving the same food for 40 years.

Rob: Next question!

Do you really find each other as annoying as you do in The Trip?

Steve: When we improvise we try to press each other's buttons with aspects of our own personalities we know are unsympathetic but more interesting. We could improvise a meal where we just have a very bland conversation and get on very well, but that wouldn't make very good television.

Don't you turn into fat bloaters with all the fine eating?

Rob: I put on eight pounds in the first series, which I struggled to get rid of. But I didn't put on anything in this series because I didn't gorge.

Steve: It's not like we're leaping over fences and scaling walls as we improvise, we just sit there and eat lots of carbs.

Rob: Actually, Steve was quite active during filming. Whenever we were near a coast, he would find a precipice at quite a height and dive off.

Steve: Not jump off. Dive.

Rob: Had he got onto that Tom Daley show, Splash, he wouldn't have done well. But he was brave, and he did dive.

Steve: Rob said, "I bet you can't dive off that," and I couldn't back down. I was quite scared.

"I don't like being with Steve unless I'm financially compensated!"

Rob Brydon

How often do you meet up for dinner in real life?

Rob: We don't, really. He lives on the south coast and travels around the world a lot, whereas I live in Teddington [Southwest London].

Steve: With lots of retired celebrities...

Rob: Near the old people's home. That's true.

Steve: Occasionally, we'll email.

Rob: Brisk emails.

Steve: About related matters.

Rob: A heated email exchange.

Steve: A very dull email exchange, to be honest. We wait until we work together.

Rob: I don't like to be with Steve unless I'm being financially compensated.

You spent a lot of the last series discussing who's the best actor. Have you resolved this yet?

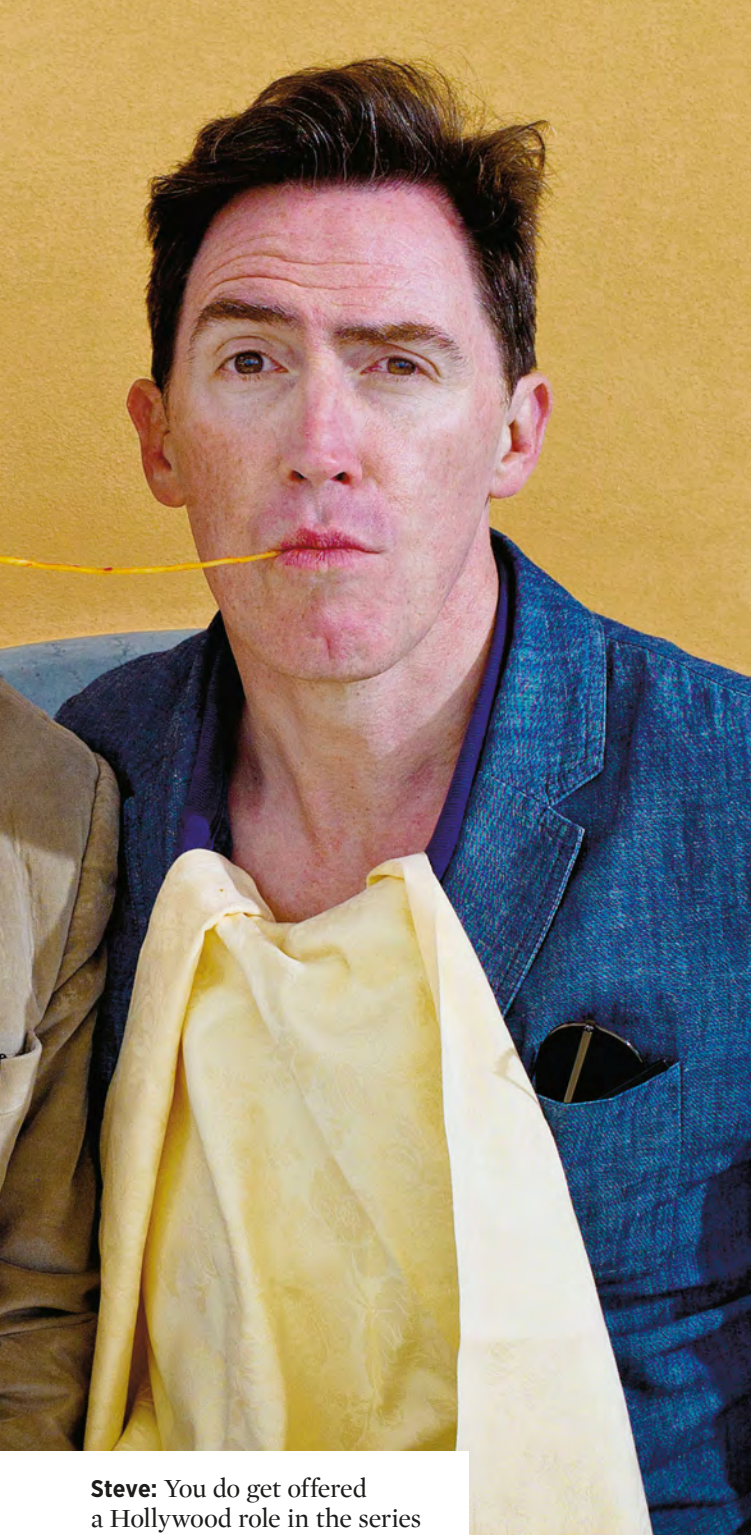

Rob: Come on. That has been settled once and for all. Philomena, anyone?

Steve: I'm glad that my film hadn't had four Oscar nominations before we filmed the series, because that would have rendered a lot of Rob's abuse at me redundant.

Rob: To lose in four categories is quite an achievement. But you've taken it on the chin.

Steve: You can imagine how that feels because that's all you'll ever be able to do!

Rob: All jokes aside, when I heard about the nominations, I was fking livid.

Steve: You do get offered a Hollywood role in the series of The Trip though.

Rob: Yeah, but not in real life!

Thanks, Steve and Rob! Finally, who does the best impressions?

Rob: I think it's him. They're forensically good. But there's a lack of joy to them.

Steve: I'll go along with that. I do a good Ronnie Corbett.

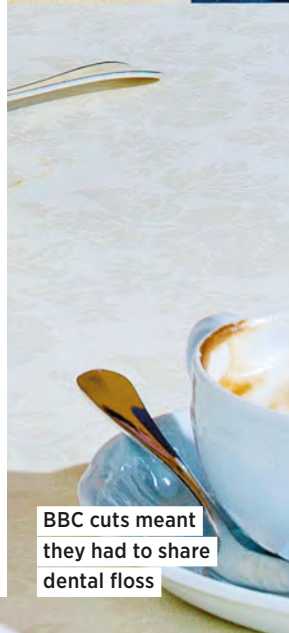

Rob: I think mine is better.

Steve: Really? Do you want a Ronnie Corbett-off?

[Both break into impressions.]

Steve: I think we'll call that a draw.

Not the world's longest car jump!

Man attempts world record. Comes second!

THIS WAS supposed to be the heroic story of French daredevil Guerlain Chicherit snaring the world record car jump, clearing a crazy 110-metre jump in his modified Mini Cooper. And it all went completely to plan. Until the landing. Which, well, didn't.

After ending up on his side, having performed seven-odd flips, Chicherit escaped with minor injuries. And a drawing board to return to.

WORDS: RORY BUCKERIDGE

Hello! Yes, it feels amazing to be back. I would have been lonely, but Rosie Jones was shooting on the same day, so she kept me company and fed me crisps and cakes off-camera.

Are people surprised when they find out how many cakes you go through on shoots like this?

Definitely. "Oh, you models never eat!" Please! I challenge anyone out there to an eating contest – I'm a pro. Do you remember the Comic Relief thing we did last year? I ate 13 slices of pizza in 20 minutes.

We were very impressed! So what else is new with you?

I just spent a weird weekend at Comic Con in Birmingham. I'd assumed it was going to be normal people who were up for meeting a few glamour models. But it wasn't. I met Batman, Robin, Voldemort... I didn't realise Darth Vader was a fan, but evidently he is!

Ha-ha! What was the nerdiest thing you saw all weekend?

Oh, it was some serious sh*t! I saw grannies dressed in Lycra, and an old woman dressed as Harry Potter, which was a bit creepy. I was really upset because I have a Wonder Woman costume and I'd have worn that if I'd known.

What's been the weirdest event you've been asked to do?

I got an email from a company called bustmyballs.com, or something, and the job was literally kicking people in the balls with high heels on. The money was fantastic, but there's no way I could do that to some poor chap's goolies! I've also been approached by crush websites before...

What are crush websites?

I think that's what they're called. They were like, "If we give you this much money, can you stand on a cockroach?" ►

“I keep my Twitter followers happy with boobs!”

That's weird enough, but then it would escalate and then they'd ask you to stand on and crush bigger things.

That's weird! You realise that if you stand on a cockroach, ten will come back to haunt you?

Ha-ha! That's not true. That's one of those lies adults tell kids. Like, I only ate my first mince pie this year because my dad used to tell me that they were made out of minced beef.

You've got almost 200,000 Twitter followers now. How do you keep them happy?

Boobs. If you can do pictures of boobs in different places, that goes down well. Train boobs, theme park boobs... I even did supermarket boobs once. It makes people think, "Wow, she might do that in my local supermarket one day!"

Is it true that you're off on a caravan holiday this year?

Yeah, I go every summer. I went last year with Rosie and the weather was awful. We got really drunk and our caravan was miles away from the club house. So Rosie rang security and told them our bathroom was flooded... the idea was that when they drove over to check it out, they could then give us a lift to the club house.

Devious! Was it just like that Inbetweeners episode?

Well, the place was really retro, and we were the youngest ones there. We were doing this weird dance move where you pull yourself over the dance floor with your belly.

After people read this, we might see a spike in people going on caravan holidays...

I hope so, 'cos it's just good British fun!

Thanks, Emma. Finally then, what else are you looking forward to about this summer?

Ibiza. I'm going in May for the opening parties. Then I'm going back in September for another cheeky holiday. That can't be bad, can it?

Life Through A War Photographer's Lens

Nuts meets Jason P Howe, the snapper who documents the world's deadliest conflicts...

Hello Jason. What can you tell us about your pre-photography background?

I worked in a camera shop for eight years and, while it wasn't quite what I wanted to spend the rest of my life doing, I liked the equipment side of things and it was where I met my first real photographers.

How did you make the leap into taking photos for a living?

I made a few very simple trips into Europe, Morocco and South America working as a freelance travel photographer.

I wanted to challenge myself though, so I started going off the beaten path a bit into countries like El Salvador and Guyana. I came across conflict for the first time and I thought that documenting it would be an important thing to do – but I didn't want to follow the usual news agenda. I wanted to go off on my own.

Did you have to make any sacrifices to embark on this?

I would have been sacrificing my dreams, my future, by not going. I sold everything I had, basically, and headed to Colombia for six months.

How did it go?

Considering I didn't really speak Spanish and never had any formal training, I did well to hook up with both the government soldiers and the rebels. Plus, I narrowly missed being blown up by an IED which killed two of the soldiers I was with, and got caught in my first firefight a week later. I kept my head, though, and I knew I could take strong pictures. However, I never sold any pictures for years. I'd run out of money, come home, stack shelves for six months then go back out for another couple of months.

At what point did you choose to make a career out of it?

In 2003, I bought a one-way ticket to Amman and took a $200 [£120] taxi to Baghdad. I had no guarantee of work, and one contact. Within a week, they'd captured Saddam and I met all the journos there. I networked like mad, handing out my business cards to everyone, and came back a year later £60,000 richer.

So can anyone just pick up a camera and go to a warzone?

If you sit at home waiting to be asked to go to your first war, you'll never go. At a certain point though, the photography skills become less important than your survival skills. You can be the best photographer in the world and get killed within days. Some do. I made a few mistakes – including nearly getting shot on the first night when I walked up to a military checkpoint in the dark. Today, I run conflict photography workshops here in Spain. If you've never been to war, it'll definitely help!

Were there any moments early on when you thought that this career would be too dangerous to pursue?

I was amazed at what you can survive. In Iraq my hotel was hit by a double suicide bomb strike, and I just got up and went out and started shooting pictures. You become the kind of person who runs towards gunfire, rather away from it.

Tell us about your experiences in documenting the work of British forces in Afghanistan.

My brother has been in the Army for 15 years and in 2007 I pitched a story to a magazine of two brothers on the frontline in Afghanistan. I felt in my element. We got ambushed six times in 24 hours. There were RPGs flying around and snipers opening fire, but because of my experience, I was able to move around safely and got good shots. It was an intense time and one of my best jobs. While embedded with my brother's regiment I made one of my strongest images, of an RPG being fired – it ran in Nuts!

Have you ever helped out while on operations?

In 2011, we helicoptered into a former Taliban stronghold and while we were clearing a compound, we walked through a doorway. Six of us passed through with no problems, but the seventh triggered a pressure pad. The soldier's injuries were horrific [he lost both legs]. I didn't want to move around and set off another bomb, and I didn't want to shove my camera in people's faces. I worked slowly and methodically while the medic saved his life. When the helicopter came in to pick him up, I helped carry the stretcher because all the other guys were laden with so much kit. A sharpshooter was taking pot shots and the level of stress was incredible – one person could clip another pressure pad and we'd all go up.

What did the soldiers make of your actions?

Once the casualty was safely on the helicopter and we were back in the compound, I shared cigarettes with the guys. They said they'd never seen a journalist do anything like that, but it just seemed like the right thing to do. Eventually, though, the risks of conflict photography started to outweigh the rewards, so I stopped. It was a kind of addiction. It's the sort of life you might see in a film – flying over a desert one day, on patrol with a group of soldiers the next. And the money was good.

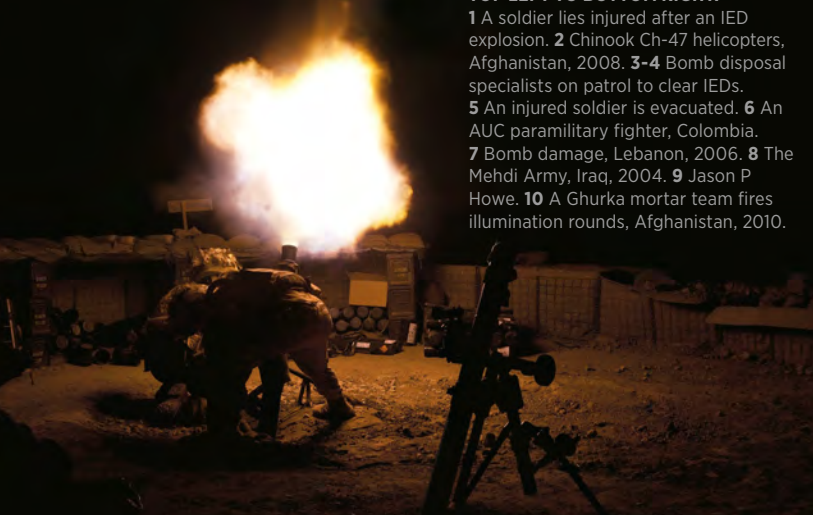

What advice would you give to someone who wanted to follow in your footsteps?

I would question what the motivation is. If you're hoping that your images are going to change the world, that's not realistic. If you want to experience new things, travel, and learn what's happening, go for it. There are stories that need to be documented. Go and find them.

Sophie Reade

Hello Sophie! What have you been up to since we last saw you at the end of last year?

Hello! I've been going to beauty school. Getting to grips with fingernails and waxings. You wouldn't believe how many girls want the full "Hollywood" wax these days. Even the "Brazilian" seems to have gone out of fashion.

Why do you think that is?

Well, guys love it, don't they? I've always been fully waxed though, so perhaps I've had a small influence on that.

Cripes! As a former contestant yourself, what did you make of this year's star-studded Celebrity Big Brother line-up?

It was the sexiest one ever. Everyone was just getting straight down to it, weren't they? I'd love to have been in it – so much girl-on-girl snogging in hot-tubs. I think they must just pump in pheromones to get people horny. That and plying the house with booze seems to help, too.

What did you make of your fellow big-boobed babes?

It was a real boob-off! We all had a good grope of each other's assets. I just can't get over the size of Stacey's boobs in particular – they're just so firm, plump and massive. I can't believe they're real – although I know they are. She's just absolutely staggering.

Have your boobs ever caused an accident?

Well, my boobs do tend to knock over drinks when I'm trying to squeeze past people in bars. Though, to be honest, I've done it deliberately a few times as every time I've done it, rather than me having to buy a replacement drink, it's always the bloke who ends up buying me one. It's a great trick! ►

How have you been enjoying the fine start to spring?

It doesn't ever get that hot up here in Cheshire, but I did a little bit of topless sunbathing in my garden last week. I didn't stay out long, just long enough for a guy in a flat that overlooks mine to come out onto his balcony and have a good eyeful. I just pretended that he wasn't there – but he probably would have appreciated a wave.

What are you most looking forward to about summer?

I've never been to Ibiza and I really feel like I'm missing out, so I'm hoping to fly out there and get involved this summer. I need to pop my Ibiza cherry – it's way overdue.

What's your favourite TV show?

I've kind of got to say Big Brother, haven't I? It definitely went through a lame phase but they've updated it and focused on what people wanted to see all along – drinking and nudity!

Lots of girls in our Ten Rude Questions feature talk about how they're into things like blindfolding and being tied up. Are Brit girls getting kinkier?

Yes. Though I've always found it hard to find a bloke who's confident enough to want to dominate me. I love being tied up and getting into a bit of spanking, but blokes all seem to be a bit scared of it, which is a shame. Maybe they're a bit intimidated and think they have to live up to Fifty Shades Of Grey, which they don't. But they could at least try!

Thanks for the chat, Sophie. Finally, if your bra could talk, what would the poor chap say?

"It's too heavy – I can't cope!" One bra snapped on me while I was out in Chester a little while ago. My boobs were fully out on display during the daytime while I was walking to a bar. I'm amazed I didn't get arrested. But I just did my best to cover up and carry on. I wasn't going to go home or anything – not while the pubs were open, anyway! ►

Stacey Poole

H i Stacey! Did you enjoy today's bra-busting shoot?
It was fabulous.
To see Sophie's boobs in the flesh was a proper pleasure. It was great to be with Joey and Kym, too, as finally I was with some girls who made me feel normal for having such big boobs myself. Joey's in particular are just outrageous – I've never seen boobs that big before!

Have your boobs ever caused an accident?

I was out with Emma Glover once and she spotted a couple of lads, and she just told me to mirror her movements. It ended up with both of us flashing our boobs at them. One of the poor lads dropped his pint glass straight on the floor. Hilarious!

Have you been making the most of the rather nice start to spring?

I sure have! I did a bit of topless sunbathing in my garden last week. There are quite a few houses that overlook my garden though, so it was more of a public display of my boobs than a private tanning session.

Are British girls getting saucier?

Definitely! I think girls are realising that, especially if you're in a relationship, then getting a bit experimental is the best way to keep things exciting. Sometimes I like to dominate and sometimes I like to be dominated – that decision is usually based on how much I've had to drink.

Thanks, Stacey. Finally then, after today's big, booby shoot, is your bra truly busted?

Ha! I don't treat my boobs that well, as it doesn't matter if the bra fits or not – if it looks good, then I wear it. So if was to talk back to my boobs, I'd say, "Don't worry – you can come out and be natural and get some rest while I'm asleep!" ►

Kym Graham

Hi Kym! Have you enjoyed the boobs on this shoot?

It's been fantastic but I've now got a bit of an inferiority complex. I always thought my boobs were pretty big but I've had a lesson from the other girls today. Everyone was very complimentary about our racks though, and there was a fair bit of touching, too!

As a Newcastle lass, can you tell us if northern girls are feistier than their southern counterparts?

Absolutely, yes. Girls used to get a bit embarrassed talking about bondage and S&M and all that stuff, but it's not like that at all now – people are talking about it and, hopefully, doing it more than ever before.

Describe your own amazing boobs in just three words...

Perky, firm and, er, prominent!

Are there any other parts of your body which we should be paying more attention to?

I've had complete strangers walk up to me and tell me that I've got eyes to die for, which is always nice to hear. Blokes are getting better at not just focusing on my boobs – there are other things to enjoy about my body, I like to think!

Have your huge boobs ever caused an accident?

I saw a guy who was staring at my boobs pretty obviously get slapped in the face by his girlfriend. I didn't hang around to hear the rest of the argument but the slap was pretty hard!

Thanks for the chat, Kym.

Finally then, if your bra could talk, what would it say?

Ha-ha! Probably "Give me a break!" I do get through quite a lot of bras, as they do have a habit of breaking. It hasn't happened in public yet but it's only a matter of time! ►

Joey Fisher

Hey Joey! What's new with you?
Hello! After the excitement of taking part in the big Nuts babes' selfie – not much! It's nice to be back in the mag again. My gradual takeover continues.

Did you enjoy today's bra-busting shoot?

I loved every minute of it. The boobs on display are truly breathtaking. I've never shot with Sophie before, so I'm very lucky. She has such an amazing body and is very cheeky.

Did she regale you with any saucy stories?

She actually didn't. I wish she had – I'd have loved to hear some of her rude stories.

What do you make of your fellow booby stars?

I'm shooting with my partner in crime Stacey Poole again. We always seem to shoot together – Nuts will always have a special place for the combined might of our boobs!

Do your boobs cause accidents?

They might knock a few things down now and then, but the worse thing that happened to me was when I went food shopping and accidentally grabbed the checkout woman's boobs. My bag of potatoes were too close to her chest and my hand slipped. So awkward!

What are you most looking forward to about summer?

Lots of sunshine and getting a natural tan of course! My boobs are in need of a tan. Ha-ha! Plus everyone looks good with a tan, don't they?

Thanks, Joey. Finally then, if your bra could talk, what would the poor chap say?

My bra wouldn't be able to speak. It would be getting smothered by my boobs! ❌

Bayern Munich vs Man United

SKY SPORTS 1/HD • 7pm

If the first leg of this Champs League quarter-final went to form, holders Bayern will have one foot in the semi-final by now. But Arsenal showed the Germans can be beaten at home last season, and Man City this. Can United complete an unlikely hat-trick?

Science Of Stupid

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC/HD • 10pm

Richard Hammond hosts a new series featuring home videos of berks coming a cropper after attempting ill-advised stunts, before exploring the science behind where it all went wrong. If that all sounds a bit too much like a nerdy edition of You've Been Framed, it is, but it's funnier than that (obviously).

The Masters

SKY SPORTS 4/HD • 7pm

While the Premier League does its level best to leave you breathless and red-faced over a frantic 90 minutes, the Masters golf is its sporty antithesis. A weekend of walking-paced, polite sports, and a terrific way to end a Sunday evening. That doesn't mean there won't be drama, spectacle and heavenly putts!

The Cleveland Show

FOX/HD • 10pm

The Browns head off to Los Angeles, where Cleveland hopes to realise his dream of becoming a baseball scout. There, he befriends a struggling actress, and comes to realise life in the sunshine state isn't all it's cracked up to be. Eh? Sounds great to us!

"I exchanged kinky messages with a few guys over a couple of days, until one finally suggested meeting up that night. As soon as I opened the door, I just wanted to jump on him. It didn't take long for that to happen for real! Needless to say, it was a great spontaneous night. And no hassle afterwards!"

Rachel, 28

"I met this incredible girl on Nuts Hook-Ups a couple of weeks ago. After exchanging a few naughty messages she suggested we meet up. Result! After a drink, we went straight back to mine. We couldn't keep our hands off each other. As soon as we stumbled through the doorway, our clothes were off. Awesome night!"

10 RUDE QUESTIONS!

And a real girl to answer them!

Daisy

22 Birmingham

1 Where's the strangest place you've had sex?

"During a warm summer afternoon a few years back, while strawberry picking, I decided to give in to the heat, which was making me extra horny. I ended up having rather sensual sex in a barn on a pile of hay!"

2 What's your trademark move in the bedroom?

"I love being on top – bouncing up and down while grinding my bum in a circular motion and having my boobs caressed. There's nothing like giving each other pleasure like that at the same time!"

3 What really turns you on?

"I love a man with ambition, power and humour. Nothing is sexier than a guy with authority outside of the bedroom. In my experience, that makes for the most amazing, intimate and pleasurable experience inside the bedroom."

4 Is it better to give or receive?

"I like the best of both worlds, to be honest. I enjoy being able to give that relief and pleasurable feeling to my man, but I also enjoy just lying back and experiencing that stimulating sensation myself sometimes."

5 What one thing would you really like to try but haven't yet?

"The thought of being blindfolded while being touched intimately really excites me. It's a fantasy I'm looking forward to taking place soon."

6 Ever got it on with another girl?

"I haven't but I would like to explore this undiscovered side of my sexuality. I want to feel the pleasure of another female being able to stimulate me and knowing exactly what buttons to press. The thought of it really turns me on."

7 Have you ever made a rude tape?

"I haven't made a sex tape yet but it's certainly something I'd like to do with a future boyfriend. I'd love to film us in action so we could watch the video back together while reliving our sexual adventures."

8 What's the rudest thing you've done?

"Well, after having a painter over at my house for a few days, I did something quite rude... I'd just got out the shower and I was wearing just a towel. We caught each other's eye and somehow ended up having sex over my kitchen table!"

9 What's your favourite position?

"I absolutely love doggy-style. It feels really good to get down to it that way."

10 What's your sexy outfit of choice?

"Definitely my sexy secretary look. The thought of having exciting sex in an office over a desk while being held by the waist really increases my sex-drive."

CONFESSION OF THE WEEK!

'I enjoyed a birthday treat'

I HAD to work late on my birthday last week, so my mates said they'd sort out a surprise for when I finished. My main task that day was showing a cute new guy the ropes, and we'd been flirting all day. As the evening progressed it got more and more intense between us, and we ended up having a steamy snog in my office. I tingled all over as his hand went into my knickers and he began rubbing my clit. So I had to have him there and then. As I jumped on my desk and pulled him to enter me, the door burst open and five pals burst in with a cake. Turns out they're the ones who got the surprise!

Kelli by email

'I had to bite the pillow'

I HAVE a new boyfriend and our bedroom sessions have been so loud, the neighbours complained. So one night recently, we tried to stay totally silent. He kissed me slowly on the lips before moving down to my neck. His fingers rubbed against my knickers, while his mouth found my nipples, kissing and licking them. As his fingers moved inside me, I found it hard to stay quiet. When he reached for the sex toys, I had to bite my pillow to stop myself from screaming. I rolled over, covering my face with the duvet while he took me from behind. The next day, my neighbour said she'd heard something creaking in the night... I told her it was probably squirrels in the loft!

Sarah Plymouth

'Our Lakeland adventure'

ME AND my fella recently went on an adventure trip to the Lake District with some mates. We had to share a room with another couple and had awkward bunk-beds. By the second night, we were itching to get near each other so he sneaked down to my bunk. He stroked my skin under my shirt and it felt so naughty when he began caressing my nipples with his tongue. I undid his boxers and slipped my hand inside to feel him getting hard. It was so good, I was writhing all over the bed and I bit his arm to stifle my noisy orgasm. Thankfully, the others didn't wake up, although they were probably doing the same as us!

Nuts HOOK-UPS CONFESSIONS!

"I'm visiting Europe and have been living in the UK for the last two months. I'm always looking for no-strings fun before I move on, so Nuts Hook-Ups is perfect. I found a guy near where I was staying in London and we met up for drinks. I instantly wanted him, so we wasted no time in finding a hotel. On the way to the room, he moved in for a kiss and as we snogged, I cheekily removed my bra. He started kissing my neck and I felt his fingers on my nipples. We moved down by a doorway and he pulled my bottoms to one side and slipped his fingers inside. It was a night to remember and I'll definitely be checking out Hook-Ups when I'm visiting the rest of the UK!"

NUZZ SPORT

Know your Champions League enemy!

Fun facts about English clubs' Euro opponents

→ THE CHAMPIONS

League is starting to get a bit tasty, not least if you happen to be a fan of Chelsea or Manchester United, as the quarter-finals get under way. We know where we'll be when the games kick off – in the pub with a pint in hand, and we'll also be clutching these fascinating facts about the English teams' opponents...

PARIS SAINT GERMAIN

Winger Ezequiel Lavezzi's nickname is El Pocho, or "the chubby one".

Jeremy Menez

was attacked by Roma fans while at the Italian club. They said he didn't try hard enough.

In his career, Ibrahimovic has kicked team-mate Antonio Cassano in the head while Cassano was conducting a TV interview, kicked team-mates Christian Wilhelmsson and Rodney Strasser in training, threatened to break the legs of Ajax team-mate Rafael van der Vaart, threatened to beat up manager Pep Guardiola, stamped on then-Lyon defender Dejan Lovren and Valencia's Andres Guardado, and had a fist-fight with Oguchi Onyewu while at AC Milan.

Striker Edison Cavani is French football's record signing at £53.86m.

The club are younger than their opponents' manager – they were founded in 1970, seven years after Blues boss Jose Mourinho was born.

There are many connections to England within the club – Zoumana Camara (Leeds), Yohan Cabaye (Newcastle) and Alex (Chelsea) all once played for English clubs, and manager Laurent Blanc was at Man United.

Captain Thiago Silva was hospitalised for six months with tuberculosis while at Dynamo Moscow in 2005 and doctors told him he came close to dying.

Dutch defender Gregory van der Wiel got into trouble in 2009 when he opted out of playing for Holland claiming concussion, then tweeted a photo of himself at a Lil Wayne gig.

PSG's reserve goalkeeper has the very amusing name of Nicolas Douchez.

BAYERN MUNICH

Bayern's English connection is equally as strong as PSG's, with Daniel van Buyten and Jerome Boateng (both Man City), Arjen Robben and Claudio Pizarro (both Chelsea) having played in the Premier League.

Club captain Philipp Lahm holds the record for the largest fine ever dished out by Bayern, after he got a £21,000 slap on the wrist for criticising the club's transfer policy in an unauthorised interview in 2009.

While at FC Groningen, Arjen Robben was once 15 minutes late for training because he'd just met the girl who he would later marry.

Midfielder Bastian Schweinsteiger's surname means "pig mounter".

The facial injuries that Franck Ribery suffered in a car accident in his youth, which led to his unique appearance, required over 100 stitches.

In the 2011/12 Champions League, goalkeeper Manuel Neuer saved £134m worth of penalties, stopping shots from Cristiano Ronaldo (£80m) and Kaka (£54m).

Bayern are the world's second most supported sports club behind Portugal's Benfica, with 223,985 members.

Defender David Alaba scored the seventh fastest goal in the tournament's history. He netted after 25.2 seconds against Juventus in April 2013.

Bayern are the current European, World and domestic club champions – they have just won the Bundesliga, and are holders of the Champions League, the World Club Championship and the German version of the FA Cup.

Grand National: a winner's guide!

2012 winner Daryl Jacob talks us through the big race!

Hi Daryl! Did you have a feeling that 2012 was going to be your year before the race?

You always hope it's going to be your year but the Grand National is a bit like the lottery. As a jockey, I stay in the same hotels as a lot of the other riders and it's the kind of thing you laugh and joke about. "Just think, come 20 past four, one of us could be a Grand National winner." It's a hard thing to believe though!

Can you tell if your horse is in the right frame of mind?

Generally, when you ride a horse in the National, you have some time to get a feel for him. When I rode Neptune Collonges in 2012, I'd never raced with him before, but I'd sat on him plenty of times – I knew he was a laid-back type of horse, which is really the kind of horse you need. Obviously, you need a good jumper too!

How do you keep yourself and the horse calm once the proverbial poop hits the fan?

It's very loud at the Grand National. Obviously, the crowd is huge, but that's when your horsemanship comes into play. You need to have a calm horse and one way to ensure that is to be very calm and focused yourself. You need to study the horses around you, know who the good jumpers and bad jumpers are, and keep your horse relaxed so that it conserves its energy for the closing stages. You have to have good contact with your horse, you need to be united with the animal you're riding. That's horsemanship.

Do you talk to your horse?

Yeah, you speak to them in horse terms!

What do you remember about your 2012 win?

That he wasn't the fastest horse in the world! I tried to get out into the first ten or so horses at the start but that didn't happen. I had to just sit in, take my time and hope that the horses in front of me fell back. In the end, he got me out of trouble.

What's the scariest fence in the National?

I always find that it's the big open ditch as you start to head out into the country. I think it's the third or fourth. That's a big, imposing fence.

What do you think is the enduring appeal of the race?

It's just a very prestigious race, with an amazing history. It's a test of every attribute in a horse – jumping ability, stamina, composure, temperament. And it's a test of everything for a jockey too.

What percentage of a win is down to pure good luck?

It's definitely a factor. I mean, last year's winner was a 66/1 shot, my horse was 33/1. They weren't expected to win. You need plenty of luck, basically, because all it takes is for one horse to fall in front of you and you're out of the race. You need a clear run all the way round and that hardly ever happens.

Does winning the National change a jockey's life?

To an extent, but jockeying has a way of bringing you back down to Earth. For example, I'm speaking to you having broken my leg and elbow last week, which is why I'm not in this year's race. Unfortunately, you can't add anything to your race fee either.

Blimey! Do the other jockeys try any dirty tricks during the race?

Not really, no. We're all in it together. We're generally very good friends so we're all wanting to get home safely. You're concentrating on your own horse, not trying to sabotage the other guys.

How do you respond to people who say that the Grand National is cruel to the horses?

Listen, these are horses that are bred to jump, bred to gallop – it's in their veins. We're not talking about taking bad horses and asking them to jump these incredible fences, we're talking about the best in England and Ireland. These horses are so well-equipped, they've been trained for years to prepare for this kind of race.

Can you describe the adrenaline rush of coming into the home stretch knowing you might win?

Sadly not, as I didn't get that. I went to a photo finish. But when I was officially called the winner, it felt great. I'll always be able to say that I'm a Grand National winner. Fantastic!

Thanks, Daryl! Finally, do you have a race tip for us?

I'll go with the horse that I was going to race, Tidal Bay. He's second favourite and has a cracking chance. Just a shame I won't be on him!

● The Grand National is on Channel 4/HD at 4.15pm on Saturday 5 April.

Maccarinelli: 'I'm an absolute demon!'

Enzo on tweeting his way into a title fight!

Hi Enzo! How's training going for the WBA light-heavyweight title fight against Juergen Braehmer?

I'm in cracking condition. The camp has been about nine weeks, but I'm always in decent shape.

What do you know about your opponent?

This is his second reign as a world champion so he's dangerous, but I've been training like an absolute demon so I'm prepared.

The fight's in Germany. That's not ideal is it?

No, but I'm not bothered. All the hard work's done, so it's just a case of keeping the weight down to 12 stone.

Do you think you've got this title shot on the quiet?

It was a lot to do with the power of Twitter. His promoters tweeted saying Braehmer's fighting on 5 April so I tweeted them saying, "Let me check my diary, guess what, I'm free #haspassportwilltravel". Next thing I knew, loads of fans were tweeting about what a fight it would be.

Did you consider retirement after your previous defeats?

I've never been beaten up in my losses so I've never got that close to retiring. I went through a stage where I lost my dad and my son was diagnosed as autistic. That was the only time I've thought about jacking it in.

Who do you think will win out of Froch vs Groves?

I think Froch will take Groves a bit more seriously after the performance Groves put in last time, but it's too close to call.

What about Fury vs Chisora?

Chisora will want to get close and Fury will want to get him at arm's length, so it depends who gets the fight their way. Hopefully I'll be ringside for both fights!

United fans turning on Fergie shocked me!

If supporters turn their anger towards the club owners, David Moyes should start to worry!

➔ I WAS astonished to see Manchester United fans turning on Sir Alex Ferguson during the Manchester derby. This is something new – the same fans have already shown their anger towards David Moyes, who was moved to write a conciliatory message to the club's season ticket holders.

The level of performance in the game was similar to that in the defeat against Liverpool nine days earlier – there was no desire, no energy, no sense that they were playing for the shirt.

I've been in United's position, where you're trying your hardest but nothing seems to quite go your way. But the City performance was so poor that a vocal minority felt the need to point the finger at the man who brought in Moyes as his replacement.

I reckon Sir Alex can live with the criticism, but David needs to worry that the next step for the supporters is to turn on the club's owners. And that's when his job could come under scrutiny.

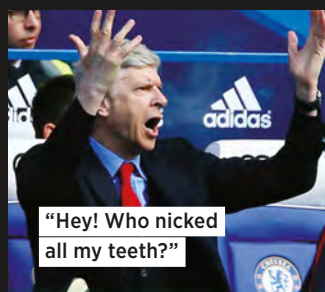

"I just can't stop whistling this new Katy Perry song"

Arsene is too stuck in his ways!

UP UNTIL last week, the title race was a four-horse affair, but Arsenal, after their defeat to Chelsea and dropped points at home to Swansea, have turned it into a three-horse race.

Robin van Persie was once asked about the difference between Sir Alex and Arsene's tactics, and he said that Sir Alex worked according to how their opposition played, while Wenger concentrates on getting his own team playing better football.

"Hey! Who nicked all my teeth?"

Arsene needs to think about his approach to games. There's a time to play pretty football, but also a time to get stuck in.

Celtic need Rangers in the SPL!

CELTIC HAVE run away with the SPL title, and for that I congratulate them, but it just shows how much the Scottish game needs Rangers back in the top flight. If I was Neil Lennon, I'd be over the moon, but he only has two options – win the league or lose your job.

Celtic need Rangers back so they can feel some sense of achievement, but if it happens, will they have the same quality of players they used to have?

Personally, I think the pair should play in the English top flight, but if Scotland decides to vote for independence, that isn't going to happen!
